CLEVELAND – February 1, 2012 – Kovels on Antiques and Collectibles February 2012 issue is now available in print and online.

Superhero action figures, unusual furniture, World War II posters, tin beer trays and antique bottles are part of the price and picture reports in the February 2012 Kovels on Antiques and Collectibles newsletter. Terry Kovel reports on pricey antiques that were found at home, in storage, or forgotten in a plastic bag in the attic. Read about original U.S. government posters from World War II that sold at auction. A pre-war poster reading “America’s Answer! Production” sold for over a thousand dollars; most went for $200 to $400. Two dozen Mego Superheroes action figures sold for prices as high as $4,807 for Spiderman! The 8-inch bendable figures excited comic book hero fans and other collectors. More Mego Superhero figures and their prices are also reported. And find graphics that range from presidents to pretty girls on lithographed metal antique beer trays. Pictures and prices are in the February issue of Kovels on Antiques and Collectibles.

Kim Kovel reports on an open-air flea market in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Regular monthly features—the Dictionary of Marks, featuring heart-shaped marks on metal and porcelain, the popular illustrated Collector’s Gallery with answers to readers’ questions, and the Buyer’s Price Guide of recent prices—are also included.

With its mixture of expert advice and reports on what’s hot in the market, the newsletter has something to offer for both beginning and experienced collectors. To subscribe to either the print or digital version of Kovels on Antiques and Collectibles, go to <http://www.kovelsonlinestore.com/>.
